An Efficient Remedy

In all cases of Bronchial and Pulmonary Affections is AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. As such it is recognized and prescribed by the medical profession, and in many thousands of families, for the past forty years, it has been regarded as an invaluable household remedy. It is a preparation that only requires to be taken in very small quantities, and a few doses of it administered in the early stages of a cold or cough will effect a speedy cure, and may, very possibly, save life. There is no doubt whatever that

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

Has preserved the lives of great numbers of persons, by arresting the development of Laryngitis, Bronchitis, Pneumonia, and Pulmonary Consumption, and by the cure of those dangerous maladies. It should be kept ready for use in every family where there are children, as it is a medicine far superior to all others in the treatment of Croup, the alleviation of Whooping Cough, and the cure of Colds and Influenza, ailments peculiarly incidental to childhood and youth. Promptitude in dealing with all diseases of this class is of the utmost importance. The loss of a single day may, in many cases, entail fatal consequences. Do not waste precious time in experimenting with medicines of doubtful efficacy, while the malady is constantly gaining a deeper hold, but take at once the speediest and most certain to cure,

A FITTING RETRIBUTION.

It was the Rev. Alfred Pennywise. He was a very good young man; but perhaps he thought himself even better than he was. In his secret heart he was quite certain that there were no temptations to which the Rev. Alfred Pennywise could succumb, and he very much despised any one with whom any temptation had any weight.

I know you will forgive me, Mr. Pennywise, for telling this your story. You told it to me doubtless for my instruction, and I should fail in my mission if I did not attempt to instruct others therewith also. Besides, who will guess that it is you? for I candidly confess that you have another name than the one I choose to call you by. He was a slim young man, with more gold in his hair than in his pocket, and he was on the way to spend his summer vacation at the country place hallowed by the presence of the object of his affection—Miss Annie Snow.

He had been paid what his congregation chose to consider an adequate quarter's salary. It was not much to begin with, and then there had been certain bills to be paid, and the small sum dwindled down to smaller still. By close economy he could spend four weeks at Hope's Corners, at the cheapest little hotel there; and he might even indulge in the awful extravagance of hiring a boat, wherein to row his ladylove up and down the river.

He loved this little Annie Snow very much, and he thought her very good and very beautiful indeed; but he could not help indulging in a pleasant little bit of vanity as he thought about himself. He certainly was a very good young man—very good indeed. He was about as good as young men were made—just about. And this came into his mind as he stepped into the train to Hope's Corners, and saw two young men drinking something at the bar of the hotel, and another young man smoking on the steps.

He took his seat and looked at the prospect as the cars flew out of the depot. He had plenty of room for himself and his traveling bag. The seat was on the shady side of the car. It was very pleasant. But this is a world of change. At the very first station all this comfort vanished. A crowd of people hurried in. The seats were crammed. Mr. Pennywise found it necessary to hoist his bag into the receptacle over his head, and to "make room," per order of the conductor, for a large-boned, middle-aged woman, with a flat hand-basket redolent of onions—(Mr. Pennywise hated onions)—and a small child with a piece of molasses taffy in its blessed little fingers.

Yes; and no sooner was this female seated than she turned to him, and remarked, in an injured tone:

"I'd like that window closed, if you please, for Jane Maria hasn't been well of the measles quite a week, and I should think anybody would have more consideration."

Mr. Pennywise shut the window, of course. He had never had the measles himself, and he looked about him for another seat, but there was none. The car was jammed. Most of the windows were shut. It was close and unpleasant. The vapor of human breath began to coat the panes. The smell of various lunches was painfully perceptible. The invalid Jane Maria jerked and fidgeted, and wiped her sticky fingers on the new and precious coat of poor Mr. Pennywise, and the train turned a corner, and the glare of the sun swept across his face and into his eyes.

Naturally, the pleasant mood which had been upon the young clergyman took flight amid this discomfort. He began to think what a wicked world this was, and what a sorrowful one too, and how long it would be before he could marry her at all. He looked at the candy-eating child and felt sure it would grow up very wicked. There was a great deal of original sin in its face—a great deal.

Then he wandered back to himself.

What a hard life it was, to be sure. How he must count every penny, and save and scrimp and forbid himself books he needed, even. Ah, it was a very weary thing to live; and he folded his arms, bent his head on his breast, and allowed the absence of ventilation to to do its worst with him.

The absence of ventilation is very demoralizing. At least Mr. Pennywise always declares it is, and he speaks from experience.

"Chicory!" cries the conductor.

The cars stop; out goes a party; in hurries a solitary individual. On go the cars again; again they stop.

"Verona!" cries the conductor—at least, he intends to do so. More cannot be expected of conductors.

"Thingumy station!"

"What's-Its-Name's Landing!"

"Sem-i-colon."

"Stopville."

One after the other the cars glide into these stations, drop passengers, take others up, and fly away again.

At last "Ogrehill" is shouted.

"Come along, Jane Maria!" screams the woman who shares the seat with Mr. Pennywise. "Come along, do! Conductor, I get out here."

And away she hurries, dragging Jane Maria with her. A crowd of passengers filled the center of the car. Mr. Pennywise heaves a luxurious sigh, throws up the window, and puts up his legs. They touch something. He looks down. It is a pocket-book—a black leather pocket-book—which lies upon the cushions. In an instant, without reflecting about the act, Mr. Pennywise has it in his hand.

"Whose is it?" he asks himself.

Conscience answered:

"It belongs to that unpleasant woman."

Sophistry interposed at once:

"It may have been there when you sat down."

"So it may," said Mr. Pennywise.

"And the woman might say it was hers."

"Such is the depravity of the human heart," replied Mr. Pennywise. "Besides——"

Where was the woman? Gone. Of course, he must run after her and inquire. He arose slowly.

"This ain't your station," said the conductor, and the cars flew on. The chance was gone.

Mr. Pennywise still held the pocket-book. He had not opened it. The fresh air blew across his face, balmy and sweet and pure. It swept away the demoralizing influence of bad ventilation. Mr. Pennywise had reseated himself with a consolatory reflection that he had probably found a good deal of money. In ten minutes there was no consolation for him. Conscience awoke from her temporary suffocation and pointed her finger at him and said:

"You are a thief. You might as well have stolen that pocket-book. You've broken a commandment. Can you ever show your face in the pulpit again? I'm ashamed of you."

The Rev. Mr. Pennywise writhed in torture; he hid his face in his handkerchief, and fairly groaned. Awful thoughts possessed him. Perhaps this pocket-book held the little all of some poor widow; perhaps she would suffer for want of it. He might now hold in his hand the bread of fatherless children—he who had thought himself so good. Men have suffered less remorse for murder than did Mr. Pennywise during that dreadful period of time which lay between him and Hope's Corners. At last there they were. Poor Mr. Pennywise hurried out of the car, totally forgetting his traveling-bag and silk umbrella. He inquired of the nearest official when he could get back to Ogrehill, and was informed that no train but the 3 o'clock ever stopped there. So there was nothing for it but to walk back; for, of course, he must leave the pocket-book at the station where the poor woman would come to look for it; and down the track Mr. Pennywise started, knowing that the sun would sink below the horizon long before he could regain Hope's Corners, and knowing that his Annie's mamma expected him to tea at 5:30 o'clock.

Mr. Pennywise reached the station of Ogrehill at last. He had walked down the track in the burning sun. His nose was scorched, his boots were white with dust. He was ready to drop with fatigue, and his heart ached with remorse. It was as much as he could do to address the station-master calmly and not grovel in the dust at his feet and cry, "Here is a thief!"

However, he did command himself, and having explained that he had found the pocket-book in the cars, and that he thought a woman in a green shawl dropped it, placed it in the hands of the rather dirty individual—who, fancying him a passenger astray, had at first inquired what the deuce he wanted—and begging that he would make sure the woman got it if she came for it, departed in a wretched frame of mind.

He walked a few yards away from the station, and then sat down under a tree. Having done what he could, he was calmer. And now he remembered that he had left his traveling-bag and umbrella in the car. By this time they were—Heaven knew where, and, of course, his visit to Hope's Corners must be postponed. He had no collars, no cuffs, no anything. Besides, he could not show his wicked face to pure, true Annie Snow.

He would take the next train home. He would walk back to the station and get a ticket. Slowly he arose. Slowly he entered the wooden building and walked up to the ticket-office.

The first proceeding when one wants a railway ticket is to pay for it. And so Mr. Pennywise put his hand in his pocket.

Alas! there was no money there. His pocket-book was gone.

"Fitting retribution," said the Rev. Alfred Pennywise. "Fitting retribution."

He walked out into the open air again. He felt in all his pockets. He looked on the ground.

"I know now," he said to himself, "just how that poor woman felt. Wretch that I am, I deserve it!"

He stood still and looked along the track, not toward Hope's Corners. Of course he must reach home now as best he could. It would probably take at least a day and a half to do the requisite walking. Already he was hungry. No matter. It was his penance.

He accepted it—not cheerfully. He knew he should never be cheerful any more, but he bowed his head and said that it was well. And then he turned up the bottoms of his pantaloons and started on his pilgrimage. That night he took a short nap under a hay stack.

The next morning he found some blackberries by the roadside.

At noon the sole of his right shoe had worked loose. At dusk the left one. He tore his pocket handkerchief in two and tied them on. It had begun to rain by this time.

But we will not harrow up your feelings any longer. Suffice it to say that about midnight Mr. Pennywise arrived at his boarding-house, penniless, shoeless, and drenched to the skin, and begged the frightened servant, in piteous tones for a cup of tea, and a bite of anything; and that the next morning he was very ill.

Just a week from that day, as he sat in his arm chair, a young man desired to see him. Being ushered in, he proved to be a stranger, who blushingly refused to be seated, and inquired if Mr. Pennywise had not lost a pocket-book.

"Then," said the youth, "this is yours. It was found in the train and left with father, who is station-master at Ogrehill. It has your name and address inside, so I thought I'd bring it in when I came. Father says a very unhappy-looking kind of a young man, that looked like a minister himself, left it. But he said a woman with a green shawl dropped it. That must have been a mistake. Glad to return it. No trouble; oh, dear, no. Had a call to make in this street. Good afternoon."

And the boy went off.

Mr. Pennywise examined the pocket-book. It was the one he had lost. It was also the one he had found. It was his own pocket-book that Mr. Pennywise had seen upon the car-seat and had picked up. It was his own pocket-book that had given him such agonies of remorse and that he had delivered over to the station-master. If he had opened it he would have known it at once. Yes, it was and always had been his own, and not that woman's.—[Tid-Bits.

The body of a drunkard was recently brought into Guy's hospital. His body was very much bloated and upon being punctured and a lighted match applied the gas which escaped burned with the ordinary flame of carburetted hydrogen. As many as a dozen of these flames were burning at the same time.—[London Letter.

IN A PERSIAN TOWN.

The streets are busy and full as a beehive; such a clatter of tongues too, that I am quite bewildered at the diversity of sound. Every one talks at the top of his voice, as though the person addressed were deprived of hearing. Vendors of enticing sweetmeats and clarified butter expose their tempting wares. "Oh, sweet beet root, and onions and carrots have I," cries the costermonger, displaying his stock in trade on the back of his donkey, and seems to drive a brisk trade. Every one appears to be out of doors. Beggars appeal to our charity, raising themselves from the heaps upon which they lie, basking in the sunshine; if you give them something, they are content, but if their prayer is unheeded it is because you are a Christian dog or a son of a burned father, and with alternate vituperations and furtive scratchings they again subside. We wind between long strings of camels; each beast is tied by a cord or iron chain to the back trappings of the one that precedes it. With an unpardonable breach of good manners one pokes his nose familiarly into the carriage. Some of them are fine, handsome beasts, still wearing their winter coats of thick, shaggy brown hair; a long fringe of it hangs about the neck, the legs also are covered as far as the knees with soft masses, which look like knickerbockers. What a motley collection it is—various types blend with a confusion of sound. Women bestride manfully their steeds, and a large, white jackass, the property of a Sayid, brays a welcome in a voice which for strength, richness and unlimited compass I have never heard surpassed. In a small square there is a circular platform open to the public, and although it can hardly be called a public building, is one of interest to many. It is planned after no particular form of architecture, and is certainly not the creation of an artistic mind. The basement is a sakkoo or platform raised a few feet from the earth, and anything more dismal can not well be conceived, for this is the execution ground, the long pole in the center of which was formerly but too often adorned with a grim and ghastly head. Except in extreme cases the penalty of death has been almost abolished; still from time to time the executioner has an opportunity of reveling in the odiousness of his vocation. The laws of each country, however barbarous, are generally adopted for the good of the respective inhabitants, and the method of executing criminals in civilized countries would produce but little effect upon the very mixed and half-barbaric people who assemble here. The public spectacle acts as a warning to others that punishment will surely follow crime, and doubtless deters many from similar offenses. How strongly are comedy and tragedy blended in this life! Dirty, barefooted little children, clad in very short shirts, or even in nature's garb only, are playing, unmindful of the horrid place, making the Persian equivalent for mud pies from the dust which may have been dyed with the blood of a score of malefactors. The road is here so bad with deep ruts, half hidden by piles of mud, that we are forced to advance slowly and with care for fear of breaking our horses' legs or leaving a portion of the carriage behind us. I have never had such a shaking in all my life, and every time we miss destruction by one of the wheels just skirting a hole instead of going into it my heart is filled with unexpressed satisfaction, although the jerks have nearly dragged my joints apart. After all, happiness is but relative!—London Society.

Pretty Bonnets.

A pretty French bonnet in princesse shape, displayed by an up-town milliner, had its entire surface covered with deep red and orange-shaded velvet, nasturtiums and wall-flower blossoms, which were veiled with black Brussels nets dotted with jet beads. Another larger bonnet of dark Venetian green velvet was wreathed with shaded plush autumn leaves, magnificently colored in scarlet, green and gold—not separated, but with one gorgeous shade blending into another like the natural foliage. A third bonnet was made of ruby velvet and trimmed with a mass of pale pink velvet dahlias set up directly in front. One model in black velvet was made brilliant and most effective by long, slender sprays of vivid red sumac arranged like feathers at the front and sides of the "fishwife" poke, which flared sharply in the center and curved broadly at each side. These flower and foliage-trimmed bonnets were exceptions to the general rule which prevailed among the handsome array of bonnets and hats, as wide cashmere-patterned scarfs in deep autumn combinations of color, velvet, gilt ribbons, sparkling tinsels, embroideries on net, military braids in basket weavings, and fancy dotted and striped ribbons, with scalloped edges, form the gay garniturage of the majority of stylish models.—N. Y. Post.

—The estate of fifteen thousand acres of William Walter Phelps, located on Teaneck Ridge, is the most celebrated in New Jersey for extent and fine arboriculture. The lands reach from the Hackensack River to the shore of the Hudson, comprising several farms and about eight hundred acres surrounding the homestead, which are laid out as a pleasure park. The center part of the homestead, as it now stands, was the high-peaked roof house; this Mr. Phelps has added to until it is now a rambling cottage of quaint design.—N. Y. Tribune.

—A teaspoonful of glycerine and a few drops of nitric acid to a pint of drinking water will generally cure a fowl that shows symptoms of bronchitis, when accompanied by a gurgling sound in the throat, as if choking.—Albany Journal.

SUPREME Court Clerk McCarthy has gone wrong. Skipped for the Sandwich Islands last Saturday, without even appraising his most intimate friends of his intended departure. An investigation of his books show him to be short in his accounts. We know Mac, He is no good. He has a weakness for women and wine and ought never to have been nominated and elected to the position he held. But when voters elect such a notorious charlatan as Dr. O'Donnell for Coroner of San Francisco it cannot be wondered at that men of McCarthy's failings are frequently exalted to some high position of trust which an honest man might not reach by devoting his lifetime to the effort.

FEED for stock has received a slight set back by the cold weather of the past few days, but, as the grass got a fine start in November and December, stock will not suffer and the grazing outlook was never better. As an offset to the check received by the grass the frost will undoubtedly prove a boon to the farmer as a destroyer of insect pests. Taking everything into consideration we have entered upon a new year which gives every promise of being one of general prosperity to the farmer and stockman, croakers to the contrary notwithstanding.

VALLEJO has formed an association to boycott the Chinese and force them from town. Santa Cruz proposes to do the same thing, and it is about time Sonoma was moving in the matter. The Chinese wash-houses alone in this town take in hundreds of dollars every month, not one cent of which finds its way back into the circulating channels of trade. A white labor laundry should be started in this town and the Sonoma Chinese laundryman sat down upon. He is sassy, dictatorial and as independent as a hog on ice.

THE Santa Rosa "Republican" commenced its twelfth volume on the 31st ult. The "Republican" since it passed into Mr. Ragsdale's hands has underwent a great improvement, and as the champion in this county of the party it represents, has been all that could be desired in the past eleven years. It is a good local paper, too, and the INDEX-TRIBUNE sends its New Year's greeting wishing it continued success.

THE reduction on inter-national money orders went into effect on New Year's day. On orders not exceeding $10 the new rate is 10 cents, the old rate being 15 cents. HOW TO FREEZE OUT CHINESE CIGARMAKERS.

Last Saturday a large number of white cigarmakers arrived in San Francisco from the East, and have since taken the place of a corresponding number of Chinese operatives. These men were more fortunate than those brought out from the East by the Cigarmakers' Association in 1882. Previous to their arrival a personal canvass was made of all cigar manufacturers in San Francisco as to their intention regarding the employment of white labor and all pledged themselves to discharge their Chinese workmen and employ white labor when available. Accepting this pledge in good faith the Cigarmakers' Association induced a great many Eastern cigarmakers to come to this State. When the white operatives arrived they were refused employment by every large firm of cigarmakers except two, and they were compelled to return East, being assisted to do so by their fellow operatives in that city. It is to be hoped that such will not turn out to be the case in this instance. The fact that the cigarmakers who arrived from the East last Saturday and were given immediate employment is no sure guarantee that the manufacturers will continne to employ them. They may be discharged at any time. The manufacturers broke faith with the Cigarmakers' Association in 1882 and if they have done so once, why not again? We trust, however, that such will not prove to be the case. But should there be a repetition of bad faith on the part of the manufacturers they can be brought to terms if smokers will only refuse to buy cigars made by any firm employing Chinese labor. There is nothing to prevent this being done. If the lovers of the weed on this coast would let those employers who hire Chinese labor consume all the cigars they make or leave them on their hands the labor question in so far as the cigarmakers are concerned would be a solved problem. Cigars in any quantity, made by white men, can be had as cheap and as good as any that Chinamen can make. This being so, there is no excuse for those who retail and smoke cigars for patronizing men who, for their own selfish ends, are acting the part of public enemies. If there be a united refusal to patronize any store or dealer who buys Chinese made cigars John will be frozen out in no time.

HEALDSBURG HAPPENINGS.

[Enterprise.]

Capt. Norton met with a serious accident last week from which he is slowly recovering.

Last week Moulton & Co. sold Capt. Berber's hotel at Windsor to Geo. Piper for $15,000.

Mrs. E. Martin and sister, Miss McGaughy, of Sonoma, spent a few days in town this week.

D. Hopper killed an immense wild cat on his ranch recently, that had been playing havoc among his sheep.

It has been decided to call a meeting of those who own sheep, the object being to decide upon some means to prevent the wholesale slaughter of sheep by coyotes.

Some hungry persons, supposed to be tramps, effected an entrance to R. E. Campbell's residence on Monday night, and robbed the house of quite an amount of prepared eatables.

The benefit of the unusual rains, especially those of last week, will last all through the present season and into next, but for the present this excessive precipitation is not beneficial. It has flooded much low land, washed the soil from some hill sides, and delayed agricultural operations. It has caused inconvenience, delay and temporary loss, but all this, should we have a favorable spring, will be soon forgotten. The excessive rainfall not only gives luxuriant pasturage, heavy growth of all crops this season, but comparative freedom from all such pests as Hessian flies, grasshoppers, beetles, caterpillars, etc. The larvæ are pretty well drowned out.

B. O'Donovan has a volunteer Irish potato vine in his garden which measures five feet in diameter, or fifteen feet around. We can vouch for the correctness of this, because Mr. O'Donovan showed us the rule he measured it with.—Santa Rosa Democrat.

THE SUPPRESSION OF SAND LOT MEETINGS.

The Question is Can it be Legally Accomplished?

Is the Order Under Consideration by the San Francisco Board of Supervisors an Abridgement of the Freedom of Speech?

A movement is being made by the Board of Supervisors of the city and county of San Francisco to suppress the public meetings upon the "Sand Lots" in the metropolis. At the meeting of the Board on Monday evening the following order was introduced by Supervisor Farwell, supported by an able speech by that gentleman, at the close of whose remarks the order was passed to print by the unanimous voice of all the members of the Board present at the meeting;

It shall be unlawful for any person or persons to call or hold any public meeting or to deliver any address in or upon any part of the grounds surrounding the new City Hall, or in or upon the square known as City Hall avenue, from the northerly line of Market street to the southerly line of Park avenue. Any persons violating the provisions of this order shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be punished by a fine of not less than $50 nor more than $500, or by imprisonment in the County Jail for not less than thirty days nor more than six months, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

While it is contrary to the fundamental law of the land to suppress or abridge the freedom of speech and of the press upon the "Sand Lot" or elsewhere in the United States, it would seem necessary to guard the privileges guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution of California against such abuses as have been practiced upon the grounds adjacent to the City Hall by unscrupulous professional agitators, whose greatest ambition seems to be to stir up strife among their listeners and talk themselves into notoriety to the end that they may be recognized as leaders of the people of their class and be enabled to claim recognition as champions of the people's rights whose influence is potent in shaping laws for the government of the country both State and National. It is to guard against abuses of these privileges that the order above quoted has been introduced before the body authorized to legislate and enact laws for the government of the municipality known as the "City and County of San Francisco." It has become notorious that the tendency of such meetings as have taken place upon the grounds in front of the City Hall is for the promotion of lawlessness of the most dangerous character to the peace and safety of the public, not only of San Francisco, but of the people of the whole State. It is believed—and thought to be susceptible of proof—that through such gatherings the dynamite conspiracy, now being investigated in the city courts, was conceived and nurtured unto the verge of maturity, when the arrest of four of the principal conspirators and the capture of their prepared instruments of destruction by the Chief of Police and his officers, saved the city from a probable great calamity, in the destruction of private property and lives of human beings.

For the preservation of good order in the city, and the safety of life and property everywhere, the abuses complained of should be suppressed by just and wholesome enactments regulating public meetings, and providing for the punishment of persons guilty of inflammatory speeches that tend to produce riots, bloodshed and infractions of our laws.

Seizure of a Distillery.

On Friday of last week Internal Revenue Agent Thomas and F. H. Swett, Deputy Collector, seized the distillery of Geo. A. Goess, situated a few miles northwest of town. It is claimed that he has been carrying on for some time the business of distilling brandy in violation of the Internal Revenue laws. The capacity of the seized distillery is said to be about 150 gallons per day. Six packages of brandy were seized by the officers. If, upon investigation, it is found that the distillery is an illicit one it will result in a forfeiture of all his property, both real and personal. The distillery alone is valued at $1,000. Years ago Mr. Goess was one of the leading distillers in this valley, but has not been engaged in the business for a long time. He has always commanded the respect and esteem of his neighbors and it is to be hoped that things are not so bad for him as outward appearances would seem to indicate.

Despise not small things. That slight cold you think so little of may prove the forerunner of a complaint that may land you in the grave. Heavy frosts have prevailed in this valley the past week, and in the early morning the ground has presented the appearance of being covered with a thin layer of snow, while ice has formed to the thickness of a quarter of an inch. Old residents say they have never before experienced such cold weather in this section.

Cady's Agua Caliente Springs will soon boast of a grocery store and blacksmith shop, in addition to the excellent hotel and summer cottages already on the place. An effort will be made for the establishment of a postoffice the coming summer and other improvements are projected, which, if carried out, will cause quite a town to spring up at that place.

There appears in these columns this week the new advertisement of Messrs. Truman, Isham & Hooker, 427 Market street, San Francisco. This firm is the leading Pacific Coast house dealing in agricultural implements, buggies, carriages, barbed wire, etc. We take pleasure in recommending the above firm to farmers and others who contemplate purchasing anything in their line.

J. R. Robinson of this place, in a letter to the "Rural Press," recommends the planting and grafting of Gravensteins, Cook's seedlings, Red Astrachan and one or two of the earlier varieties of apples in Sonoma Valley orchards. He says "that Gravensteins stand upon their acknowledged merits, are great bearers and popular. Cook's Seedling originated in Sonoma. It is a great bearer, large, striped, handsome, late, a good keeper, unexcelled as a cooking apple and when fairly ripe and matured is a superior eating apple." As Mr. Robinson is a close observer and an intelligent horticulturist he evidently knows whereof he speaks, and we submit his suggestions to Sonoma Valley horticulturists.

Shot and Killed.

Andrew Johnson shot and killed John Boyd at Ocean View House, in this county, last Saturday. The parties are young men, and had a dispute the day before. While Boyd was watering his horses he was shot three times in the back and died a few minutes later. The assassin used a Winchester rifle and stood behind a chicken-house. Johnson denies having done the shooting.

From the Santa Rosa "Democrat" of Tuesday, we glean the following additional particulars: "Andy Johnson and John Boyd, deceased, while at the hotel at Ocean View, Friday night, had some words, both parties losing temper, but no blows were exchanged, and it was finally thought to have been ended. After the deceased had retired to his room, Johnson took occasion to express himself still further and in terms more forcible than polite. Finally succeeding in working himself into an insane fit of anger he proceeded to the room occupied by Boyd, reiterating all the time, as a stimulant to his anger, that he would see if Boyd could whip any Johnson on the coast. Boyd at first refused to have any disturbance with Johnson, but was finally goaded to it through the taunts and abuse heaped upon him by the angry man. They, therefore, proceeded to the street, where Boyd had finally agreed to give Johnson the satisfaction he demanded. But on arriving at the proposed scene of battle Johnson declined to fight, saying, as he jumped into his cart, that he would find some one to fix Boyd. Boyd again retired to his room. He arose as usual the next morning, and, in company with Cunningham, proceeded to the stable to attend to his horse. When about midway between the house and barn he was shot, the bullet entering under the left shoulder and passing out above the nipple of the right breast. A second and third shot was fired, the second one entering the body beneath the right shoulder blade and lodging against the left breast just above the heart. The third shot took effect in the leg, the second shot, which was the death wound, having felled him to the earth. The repeated firing brought the boy from the barn, and seeing Boyd on the ground before him started to his assistance. Before reaching the mortally wounded man, it is stated, he turned partially around and cried, "Andy, don't shoot me." Assistance was immediately summoned, but the wounded man was past the power of all earthly succor. On examination it was found that the weapon used by the murderer was a Winchester rifle of the improved model. Still further search disclosing three shells behind the chicken-house, where it is supposed the murderer concealed himself while waiting for his victim. A Coroner's inquest was held, the verdict being homicide by parties unknown. The prisoner takes things very coolly, and does not have the appearance of one guilty of murder in so cowardly a manner. He professes complete ignorance of the whole affair, stating that he was always a friend of Boyd's, and was in bed at the time the deceased was shot. Further particulars will be brought to light at the examination.

THE SUPERVISORS.

The Board of Supervisors of Sonoma County met in regular monthly session at the Court House, Santa Rosa, at 10 o'clock on Monday morning last. Present—Supervisors Ellis, Chairman; O'Hara, Coulter, Connolly and Allen. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

Wesley Wood appeared before the Board in reference to the bad condition of the road leading from Fulton to the Healdsburg road. Mr. Wood stated that the Road Overseer had been spoken to in regard to the same, but nothing had been done as yet, and he asked the Board to take some action on it. The matter was postponed until the county's title to the road could be ascertained.

At 12 o'clock the Board took a recess until 1 P. M.

At the afternoon session Ransom Powell of Healdsburg appeared before the Board in behalf of the citizens and stockmen of Mendocino and the northern townships, requesting that something be done to protect the sheep-raisers from the coyotes. Mr. Powell thought that if the Board would place the bounty for scalps of coyotes at $10, something could be accomplished, but he would rather see no action taken at all if a smaller amount than $10 was offered. Mr. Powell mentioned several sheep men who had suffered extensively from the coyotes, among others he spoke of Mr. Jas. Caldwell, owner of the Calamayomi grant, who had lost fully $2,000. He gave as his opinion that the only way the country could be relieved of the scourge was by making the bounty large enough to make it an object for experienced mountaineers to hunt the sheep killers on the various ranches throughout the county. The matter was postponed indefinitely.

A petition was read, signed by some twenty-eight persons, residents of Analy township, praying that a board of viewers be appointed to view the Pepper road, running from the Petaluma and Bloomfield road and connecting with the road leading from Petaluma to Sebastopol, preparatory to changing the same. The change contemplated will avoid a creek, which now runs a considerable distance in the road, and will place the road on much better ground, the right of way of the said road being estimated at $225, Mr. C. H. Hunt agreeing to pay the amount of the right of way. A bond for the amount of $100, signed by C. W. Hunt, N. B. Hasbrouck and P. C. Smith was presented.

On motion of Mr. Allen, the petition was accepted and placed on file, and Messrs. S. McReynolds, F. H. Denman and W. C. Andrews were appointed to view said road.

Messrs. T. J. Riley and A. Wright, druggists of Healdsburg, and the following druggists of Santa Rosa: Messrs. W. C. Reed, J. W. Warboys, C. D. Frazee and W. H. Hill, appeared before the Board and expressed themselves in regard to the effect Ordinance No. 10 had upon all those engaged in the drug business. Mr. Wright addressed the Board at length, concluding his remarks in terms easily comprehended. He said that under the present Section 3, if a person came into his store and purchased ten cents worth of camphor, and wanted twenty-five cents worth of whisky or alcohol with which to dissolve the camphor, he could not sell the same without violating the law. The other gentlemen present also addressed the Board, illustrating the various circumstances which might arise making it imperative for the sale of liquor in case of sickness or accident without a physician's prescription. They asked that said Section 3, as amended at the last regular session, be amended in such a manner as to allow druggists to sell liquor for medicinal purposes without being in danger of prosecution. No action was taken.

On motion of Mr. Allen, the monthly reports, ending December 31st, of Road Overseers G. H. Black, J. Patrick and W. F. Harris of Cloverdale, Knight's Valley and Washington road districts respectively, were accepted and placed on file.

The following bills were allowed; G. H. Black, $2 18; J. Patrick, $21; W. F. Harris, $95.

On motion of Supervisor Coulter, the report of H. J. Russell, Road Overseer of Santa Rosa road district, was accepted and placed on file, and his bill for $355 49 allowed.

On motion of Mr. Coulter, the report of Road Overseer Gallant Rains for the Petaluma road district, was approved and placed on file, and the bill of $509 20 allowed.

On motion of Supervisor O'Hara, the Board adjourned until Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock.

TUESDAY, January 5th.

The Board met pursuant to adjournment at 9 A. M., all the members being present.

A petition, signed by twenty citizens of Petaluma township, requested the Board to place the family of the late Frank Silva on the indigent list of persons requiring the assistance of the county, was received. The matter was laid on the table for consideration.

On motion of Mr. Allen, it was made the order of the Board to have the sum of $332 34, now in the Rebate Fund, transferred to the Bridge Fund. The Clerk was instructed to inform the County Treasurer and County Auditor of the order.

The report of G. W. Burris, Road Overseer of Mendocino Road District, was accepted and placed on file, and his bill of $174 75 allowed.

The County Treasurer and Auditor were authorized to transfer the sum of $6,000 from the General Fund to the Swamp and Overflowed Land Fund. The Clerk was instructed to inform the above officials of the action of the Board.

The report of J. Willey, Road Overseer of Analy Road District, was accepted and placed on file, and his bill for $164 73 allowed.

The report of E. Gillan, Road Overseer of Sonoma Road District, was accepted, placed on file and his bill for $94 59 allowed.

On motion of Supervisor Allen, it was made the order of the Board, under section 2652 of the Political Code, that the amount of road poll tax to be levied on each person over 21 and under 55 be $3 for the year 1886.

On motion of Mr. Allen, the Treasurer and Auditor were authorized to transfer the sum of $35 from the Bridge Fund to the Petaluma Road Fund.

The report of Benjamin Clark, Road Overseer of Russian River Road District, was accepted and placed on file and his bill for $108 67½ allowed.

The matter of the proposed from Forneville to Russian River station coming up consideration, the matter was laid over until Tuesday, February 2d at 2 P. M.

The time set for the consideration of the proposed road from the Petrified Forest road to the Sonoma and Napa county line being at hand, a hotly contested discussion took place lasting two hours and a half. Judge Rutledge appeared on behalf of Mr. Maxwell, through whose road the land must pass for a distance of three-quarters of a mile.

T. J. Geary appeared for the petitioners who ask for the road.

Supervisor Coulter opposed the construction of the road, as did also Mr. Allen, while the sympathies of Supervisors Ellis, O'Hara and Connolly were with the petitioners.

After considerable discussion the matter was postponed indefinitely.

A petition was received from a number of persons in Russian River Road District, asking for the construction of a bridge over Mark West Creek, on the Healdsburg and Sebastopol road. On motion of Supervisor Coulter, the Clerk was authorized to advertise for proposals for the construction of the bridge, proposals to be received up to 2 P. M., February 2, 1886.

The report of W. J. Cunningham, Overseer of Bodega Road District, was accepted and placed on file, and his bill for $21 allowed.

The sum of $8 40 was transferred from the Bridge Fund to the Salt Point Road District Fund.

On motion of Supervisor Connolly, it was ordered by the Board that $21 be transferred from the Bridge Fund to the Bodega Road District Fund.

The report of Peter Eckert, Overseer of Salt Point Road District, was accepted and filed and his bill for $158 allowed.

The Board then adjourned until Wednesday morning.

SANTA ROSA NEWS.

[Daily Democrat.]

There was a knifing affray in Santa Rosa New Year's eve. One of the artists was badly cut about the face.

Frank Robinson and Miss Cora Strother were married on Wednesday evening, the ceremony being performed by Rev. T. A. Atkinson.

A sneak thief entered the residence of J. G. Letold, on Fifth street, Wednesday night, but was frightened off before he had time to steal anything.

Frank Carrillo was taken before Judge Temple, Saturday, on a writ of habeas corpus, but the application for discharge was denied, and the prisoner remanded.

Hardware men and dealers in firearms state that the sale of revolvers has exceeded, within the past three days, that of the whole year, ending December 31st.

Deputy Marshal Mock went through six tramps and suspicious characters Thursday and Friday. A gold washed nickel was found in the possession of one of the gentlemen of the road.

James M. Mason was married yesterday, in the Episcopal church, to Miss Emily R. M. Smith. This is the same Mr. Mason who was with Mr. Fitton when he was drowned, and so narrowly escaped death himself.

A prisoner in the custody of John O'Farrel passed Wednesday night in Santa Rosa before leaving for Occidental, where the man is wanted on a charge of rape. Mr. O'Farrel followed the man to San Francisco, where he caught him. The deed was perpetrated on a married lady in Occidental.

Week before last J. F. O'Brien, while returning from Cloverdale to Kelseyville on a wagon, came very near being killed. The wheels ran into a chuck-hole, he was thrown from his seat, and two wheels ran over him. Fortunately the wagon was lightly loaded, and Mr. O'Brien was not seriously hurt.

Wm. Chapman made his escape from the Napa Insane Asylum on Tuesday morning of last week, and walked from that city to Santa Rosa, carrying with him a large satchel. Officers Mead and Raney conveyed the unfortunate man to the jail. He was so utterly worn out with his thirty-five-mile walk that it was very hard work to assist him toward the retreat.

Parties unknown, with the aid of a large block of stone weighing fifteen or twenty pounds, broke a hole in the plate glass window of Rohrer, Einhorn & Co.'s store, Thursday morning, large enough to enable them to reach the two twenty-dollar pieces the Knights of Pythias had on exhibition there with the other prizes, which were to be awarded at the carnival.

Several of the curious ones were badly sold New Year's day by taking a peep into a covered box set out in front of the Occidental Hotel. The inscription on the top of the box informed the reader that a mammoth bat was therein contained, which was captured on the Isle of Hades by Prof. Vanderhoof. On peeping in we saw an ordinary, innocent-looking brick—bat.

Friday morning, between 5 and 6 o'clock, Mr. Roberts, the proprietor of the Fashion saloon, was robbed of $83 in gold and silver. Having attended the carnival, he did not think it worth while to go to bed at that early hour in the morning, 4:30, but lay down on the lounge in his office at the rear of the saloon, locking the door on the inside. The thief entered through a window took the money from Mr. Roberts' hip pocket, making his exit by way of the office door and passing out through the front door of the building.

THE REASON WHY.

Prostrate in grief before me lies
A man who will not advertise.
His stock is old, moth-eaten, stale,
And yet he will not tell his tale.
His neighbor sells his goods so fast,
He wonders why they do not last.
The reason is quite plain, indeed,
He states his case and millions read.
All men who really want to buy
Peruse the INDEX-TRIBUNE, and that is why
This advertiser always sells.
The INDEX-TRIBUNE his daily status tells.
He keeps men posted, tells his price
And gets a buyer in a trice.
The man who will not advertise

The World's Greatest Opium-Eater.

[N. Y. Corr. Sacramento Bee.]

The greatest "opium fiend" the world ever saw was born in England one hundred years ago (August 15, 1785) and bore the name of Thomas de Quincey. As a consumer of the drug he stood unrivalled in his day, and his record has yet to be beaten by any well authenticated case. He was brainy and intelligent, spoke Greek at thirteen, composed Greek verses at 15, knew more than most of his teachers at 18, began taking opium at 19, indulged in the habit for fifty-two years, wrote and rewrote his "Confessions of an Opium Eater," gave his dreams to this world in all their grandeur in his work, and then followed the example of others gone before and entered the land where his dreams had often carried him, and bade farewell to this life and opium together with the knowledge that he had mingled one with the other to a far greater extent than his predecessors had dared or his successors would care to do. In his meridian stage of opium eating this man had taken a daily dose of 8,000 drops, or eighty teaspoonfuls of laudanum, the tincture of opium, which was considered a dose sufficient for 325 hospital patients and enough to send a hundred men to face Satan or St. Peter Yet he took this dose every day for some time, and the ghost of life didn't desert him, nor the angel of death gather him in during this period. He enjoyed the transports of an opium Paradise and suffered the cruel pangs of an opium perdition for years, breaking the habit for four or six months at a time, and, in his own language, "invariably after such victories I returned, upon deliberate choice, after weighing all the consequences on this side and that, to the daily use of opium."

The above mentioned man ate opium, however, and in that was an exception to the great class of people of the present day and age who use it in another, and by many thought surer, way to poverty and the grave. The first white man who is said to have smoked opium in the United States was a sporting man named Clendenin, and he tried it in California in 1868. The next is said to have tried it in 1871 at the solicitation of the first, and four years later in 1875, it was found to have spread so rapidly that stringent laws, zealous police, heavy fines, and even imprisonment of victims, could not check the vice. In ten years the habit has so increased that there is hardly a city or town in the United States of any note where the knowing cannot find a bunk and a pipe ready for them. In 1882 it was estimated that there were some eight or ten thousand smokers in this country. In 1885 it is said that there are not less than 75,000 "hitters of the pipe" in the land of the free and the home of the brave, and the worst of it is that the greatest number of these do not belong to the regular loafer and bummer element, but include some of the minds that should have reached a more elevated sphere than the globe of an opium pipe, and numbers whose every day life might have been brighter than the dissolving views of an opium vision.

"Showing the White Feather."

This phrase is commonly used to signify cowardice, and has been derived from the fact that no game cock is supposed to have a white feather. But that it was sometimes meant as a token of peace, for which purpose a white article is very generally employed, may be learned from the following story. Many years ago, when the United States were not so populous as they now are, fights often took place between the red men and the backwoods settlers. One day a Quaker saw a band of Indians coming down on his house, but he refused to fly. He procured a quantity of food and set it before them. After they had eaten it the chief fastened a white feather over the door as a sign of peace and friendship. Ever afterwards the Indian hordes, though they often passed the house on pillaging expeditions, respected the badge, and injured neither the inmates nor the property.

Those that would be safe have need to be suspicious of the tempter. The garrison that sounds a parley is not far from being surrendered.

SULLIVAN AND THE MINER.

The history of the tour of the John L. Sullivan Combination in the wild West is an interesting one, but the chief actors in many of the occurrences are not anxious to make them all public. Sullivan's business manager, however, is fond of relating the story of how the great pugilist came near meeting his match in Colorado.

"It was in one of the mining towns," the manager said. "You see, wherever we gave an exhibition we advertised that if anybody in the country wanted to spar with Sullivan, with or without gloves, he would be accomodated. Well, when we arrived in this little place we found a challenge already waiting. There was a miner there who was anxious to meet Sullivan on the stage and spar four or five rounds with bare fists. I found that the other miners had made up a purse of $500 and were willing to back their man to that amount. Of course, I covered it, perfectly confident that Sullivan would win. We were going to exhibit that night, and Sullivan had been drinking pretty heavily for two or three days, though he had not missed any performances. Our rule was to have some of the other members of the combination give exhibitions of wrestling and sparring, and then conclude by having one of them 'wind up' with Sullivan, unless there was somebody in the audience who wanted to try it—which did not occur very often. Upon making inquiry in the village during the day, I heard so much of this man the miners had backed against Sullivan that I made up my mind to have a look at him. They called him the 'hairy man.'

"I found him training in a saloon, and for the first time on that tour I was scared. He was six feet three inches tall, weighed 220 pounds without having an ounce of superfluous flesh, and he was covered over with thick, black hair, like a Newfoundland dog. His arms were as hard as bars of iron, and all the miners said he had a great deal of science and struck a terrible blow. I found that he had a reputation for miles around, and there even had been talk of raising money to send him East to challenge Sullivan. Sullivan had been drinking so much that I feared he would meet his waterloo, unless I could induce the other to give up the fight. So I told him that Sullivan had been drinking, that he was very ugly, and that it would not be safe to fight with him that night. The hairy man only laughed and said that if Sullivan could stand it he could. His confidence scared me, because every pugilist—no matter who he is—who has ever fought Sullivan has been very nervous about meeting him, and this fellow was happy about it. I finally told them that I'd forfeit the $500 if they'd keep the hairy man off the stage that night, of course putting it on the ground that Sullivan might kill him. But it was no use; they said Sullivan must fight or they'd all get together and tar and feather him.

"When I told Sullivan that I'd tried to get the fight off he was furious, and I actually thought he'd assault me. He accused me of trying to destroy his reputation, and said that he was never in better fighting condition in his life. He was so mad that it sobered him, which was one good effect anyway. We gave the exhibition in a hall that was made to hold 2,000 persons, but more than 3,000 were piled into it, and hundreds of persons had come scores of miles for the occasion. I found that all the betting was on the hairy man, and I was entirely prepared to see Sullivan get whipped. When they came on to the stage Sullivan could hardly wait for time to be called, and he glared at the hairy man like a tiger. The hairy man was as confident as ever, and his friends yelled themselves hoarse in admiration. When time was called Sullivan made a furious rush at the hairy man, struck him just once between the eyes and knocked him senseless off the stage into the auditorium. I was so sure he was killed that I made Sullivan get out of the hall and prepare to leave the place in a hurry for fear he'd be lynched. It took us twenty minutes to bring the hairy man to himself, and we only managed it then by cutting off his thumb-nail and making incisions in the quick of the thumb underneath. And if you ever saw a humbled and admiring gang, it was the friends of that miner. They were all down at the train to see Sullivan off in the morning, and the hairy man shook hands with him without saying a word, absolutely speechless with admiration. That was the only time I feared that Sullivan had met his match.

Who is wise? He that learns from every one. Who is powerful? He that governs his passions. Who is rich? He that is content.

MISCELLANEOUS.

No Boon that Science has Conferred

has been brought with greater blessings than that which has accrued to the inhabitants of malarial ridden portions of the United States and the Tropics from the use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. The experience of many years has but too clearly demonstrated the inefficiency of quinine and other drugs to effectually combat the progress of intermittent, congestive and bilious remittant fevers, while on the other hand, it has been no less clearly shown that the use of the Bitters, a medicine congenial to the frailest constitution, and derived from purely botanic sources, affords a reliable safeguard against malarial disease, and arrest it when developed. For disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels, for general debility and renal inactivity, it is also a most efficient remedy. Appetite and sleep are improved by it, it expels rheumatic humors from the blood, and enriches a circulation impoverished by mal-assimilation.
